INTRODUCTION: blended and flipped learning – adding video

Typically, language learning programs blend online self-study material with face-to-face classes. The important thing is that the instructional design brings together both components. Flipped classrooms are a type of blended learning that have a more specific focus. So, how does this work in language learning?

Traditionally, students attend classes where language and receptive skills (oral and silent reading, along with listening) are presented by a teacher. Students spend time understanding the new language and practicing it in a more or less controlled way. They are normally then given homework to practice the language further at home.

IF WE FLIP this traditional way of teaching, the work that is usually done in the classroom is done at home with good online course material. This frees up classroom time, so students can really try to use the language that they have already studied. The teacher has much more time to help students use the language practically, help them produce in the language, and sort out anything students don't understand.

What are the benefits of blended learning or, more specifically, why might a flipped classroom be a useful model?

- The online course content can be accessed at any time of the day and any time of the week so fits in well around busy timetables.
- The teacher still serves as a facilitator of learning, and the experience is shared with other students, but in a fashion that maximizes the time both inside and outside the classroom.
- It can be a very cost-effective way to study a language.
- Learners often have access to more study material than they would in a conventional face-to-face lesson.
- It's usually fun and learners can use diverse, helpful online learning tools.
- This is an excellent and natural component of task-based language learning.

Blended, flipped and video-supported learning as part of task-based LANGUAGE learning

Task-based language learning is an approach where the planning of learning materials and teaching sessions are based around doing a task. In education, a task refers to an activity where communication is necessary: for example; deciding something, solving a problem, designing or organizing something, or telling someone to do something.

Task activities are usually rich in language, involving a wide variety of language areas, as well as all component skills; reading, writing, listening and speaking. A task must involve the processing of information, and some kind of communication or interaction.

And a task can be something that you do alone, or that you do with someone else or in a group. For example, grammar practice activities, where the aim of each activity is just to practice one particular aspect of language.

Helpful online tool for task-based lessons: iSLCOLLECTIVE

iSLCOLLECTIVE is a community of language teachers from around the globe who share self-created worksheets on a free-to-use platform. Currently, they host Word doc/docx and ppt/pptx (Powerpoint PPT) files. The tools are appropriate for all language teachers, whether teaching in schools or doing one-on-one instruction. The site has six language platforms, however new participants can start new language sections. In addition, many of the existing products created for the ESL section of the site are adaptable to teaching Ukrainian as a second language. The site also offers an area to share teaching tips and ideas, as well as a forum/discussion board (See "Menu").

To upload self-created worksheets, you just use this simple form:
<https://en.islcollective.com/share>

The head of the homepage features available search filters to assist you with tagging your sheet uploads, and making them more easily identifiable and findable:

To add a vocab list to your lesson, type the word on the left and its definition on the right, then add them with the Plus button. We recommend Merriam-Webster's learners' dictionary: <http://www.learnersdictionary.com>. You can include a translation, but please always include a definition. Use this format then: e.g. WORD: "dog" DEFINITION: "an animal that barks (cachorro)". This way all of our members can take advantage of your Vocab list. As for grading the level, we recommend <http://vocabulary.englishprofile.org> for grading vocabulary and <http://englishprofile.org/english-grammar-profile/egp-online-for-grammar>.

PRE-TASKS

Here you can outline a step-by-step guide about how to build a lesson around your video quiz. A pre-task is any task you'll do before the video quiz, e.g. watch the entire video, ask a question about the gist of the video, or pre-teach some difficult words.

FOLLOW-UP TASKS

A follow-up task is any task you'll do after the video quiz, e.g. a role play or a writing task for homework. Your lesson plan will be visible on the page of the video lesson.
